WHY AMERICAN INDIAN STUDIES?

In light of recent research examining the state of American Indian Studies, this Inaugural Colloquium will include a focus on the future of American Indian Studies, and how this degree will serve American Indian students after graduation, when they enter their future careers. In addition, the Inaugural Colloquium will build support for Bacone College students to continue and progress through matriculation from American Indian tribes, businesses, organizations, and community members.

This one day Colloquium is a venture focusing on academic and cultural perspectives from various educators, professionals, community members, tribal leaders, and others interested in American Indian Studies. Two expert keynote speakers in American Indian Studies, Dr. Jerry C. Bread (Kiowa-Cherokee) and Dr. Michael Yellow Bird (Sahnish [Arikara] and Hidatsa First Nations) will share their research on current issues and concerns regarding American Indian Studies.
