

Some concerns regarding the dorms here at Bacone College have been raised, and we would like to answer those concerns directly.

Our students are the heart and soul of Bacone College, and we understand that stable living conditions are critical to their success. To that end, we have gone to great lengths to ensure that they have a place to relax, study and sleep – even through Oklahoma’s famously intense winds and rain.

Between our custodial services, provided by a professional company located in Tulsa, and our prompt response to common college dorm problems such as bedbugs and water leaks, we believe we bear out our assertion that we remain dedicated to student comfort and safety. In addition, we operate a 24/7 emergency line for students to call with afterhours issues that require immediate attention.

Many of the blessings and gifts we receive during fundraisers go towards improving and repairing the buildings here at the school. We are improving daily; proof of which can be found in the approaching grand opening of our new dining hall. We hope this addition will be just the beginning of improvements and additions to our facilities.

In regards to specific complaints recently made public, we believe the actions taken to correct those complaints have been misrepresented by the individual in question, and remain willing to prove that we have made every effort to accommodate those who have been displaced by poor weather.

There is no better measure of a school’s worth than the safety and success of its students, and we at Bacone remain proud of the work we’ve done to ensure both.
